Heartland

Heartland is an interdisciplinary project which reflects on the visual culture, art and music of the heart of the United States. The Heartland project consists of a group exhibition in the Van Abbemuseum together with a musical programme in the Muziekcentrum. It will also include ancillary events, such as debates, lectures, a photo exhibition, publications, and an artists in residence programme. The Heartland project is an ambitious collaboration between the Van Abbemuseum and the Muziekcentrum Frits Philips in Eindhoven, and with the Smart Museum of Art at the University of Chicago as an American partner. Heartland will take place in Eindhoven from October, 2008 until January, 2009. The exhibition will be reconceived for a presentation at the Smart Museum of Art in 2009.

At a time when reporting on the United States is dominated by news about the coming presidential elections, the Van Abbemuseum and Muziekcentrum Frits Philips will attempt to present a relatively nuanced picture of the heartland of the United States from both an American and a European perspective. Heartland will include established as well as lesser known American and European artists and musicians. Their personal outlooks will present a counterweight to the predominant clichés regarding America. The Heartland, although not formally a single region, extends from Minneapolis and St. Paul in the west to Detroit in the east and New Orleans in the south. Although not all the artists actually live in the Heartland, it is this region that forms the basis of their work, in the sense that they engage with its rich history, cultural diversity and current themes of the states flanking the Mississippi River.
